Mokena Merchant
Retires After 50
Years In Business

A real estate transaction of much import took place in Mokena last week when Mr. and Mrs. R. Hensel sold their drug store to Mr. Earl Krisam, of Chicago. The latter will establish a general merchandise store, which will fill a need in this locality.

We are sorry to have the Hensels go out of business but after the many years in which Mr. Hensel has conducted a drug store we feel it is a fine thing that they can retire and take life easy.

Mr. Hensel was born in Mokena, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fredericka Hensel. He received his early schooling in the old village school and when 15 years old got his first job, that of a clerk in the James A. Ducker store in Mokena, the latter being the fore runner of the Geo. A. Ducker store now in Joliet.

After working for several years in the Ducker store, Mr. Hensel went to Chicago and worked for his cousins who had a drug store. There he learned the drug business through practical experience. Twenty three years ago, in 1923, Mr. and Mrs. Hensel moved to Mokena, having purchased the grocery store from Mr. Zumstein, and established a drug store, which they have maintained since, rounding out 50 years for Mr. Hensel in the drug business.

We will miss Mr. and Mrs. Hensel in the business life of Mokena and to Mr. Krisam, who takes over April 1, we extend a cordial welcome and hope he will enjoy his home here and that he will be afforded a good patronage.

IMMUNIZATION PROGRAM
HELD AT FRANKFORT SCHOOL

On Friday, December 13, an immunization program was held at the Frankfort school. Other schools participating were Ann Rutledge, Gatter Schaefer, Stassen, Bettenhausen, Hansen, Harms, Esch and Hasenager. This program had been planned by members of the Frankfort PTA. PTA members in charge of the project were: Mrs. Vernon Fink, Mrs. Blanch Mitchell, Mrs. Herbert Folkers, Mrs. John Bisset, Mrs. Roy Koerner and Mrs. Clarence Wise. They were assisted by Dr. M. J. Buckley, Frankfort physician and Miss Mary Jones, Public Health Nurse. Schools in this group which now have 100 percent immunizations for both diphtheria and smallpox are Schaefer, Harms and Esch. Schools with 100 percent immunization for diphtheria only are Bettenhausen and Stassen while Hasenager school now has 100 percent immunization for smallpox. The other schools have all raised the percentage of immunizations above their 1945-46 record.

Dr. Cecil A. Z. Sharp states that the danger of death from diphtheria is greatest among preschool children and for that reason all children should be immunized for diphtheria before they reach the age of one year. In order to prevent serious epidemics of diphtheria among school children, at least 60 percent of these children must be re-immunized when they enter school. It is a well known fact that outbreaks of smallpox can be expected to occur in any area where fewer than 90 percent of the children in school have been vaccinated for smallpox.

It is the aim of the Will County Health Department to have all Will County children protected against smallpox and diphtheria. Each year we have more and more 100 percent schools. Qualifications for eligibility of a school for the 100 percent list are—children who have never been vaccinated for smallpox, or who were vaccinated five or more years ago, should be vaccinated. For diphtheria immunization, two shots given four weeks apart are necessary and if a child received diphtheria shots five or more years ago he should receive a booster shot Dr. Sharp stated. The children in this group received their first diphtheria toxoid November 18.

MARCH OF DIMES JAN. 15-30
FOR BENEFIT OF POLIO VICTIMS

The ninth annual March of Dimes, through which funds are raised to carry on the work of the Cook County Chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, will be concentrated in the period from January 15 thru 30, it was announced by Britton I. Budd, chairman. Mr. Budd, who has been head of the Chapter for five years, is president of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois.

Contributions may be made directly by mail by simply addressing: "March of Dimes, Chicago."

The infantile paralysis outbreak in Cook County the past summer and fall was the second worst in 30 years, exceeded only by the number of cases in 1943. About 200 percent more persons in the county were victims of the dread disease than in 1945. Illinois as a whole showed the second highest number of cases in the country, with Minnesota suffering the nation's highest incidence for the year. Nationally, the picture was the worst in 30 years with about 24,000 cases reported and exceeded only by the year 1916.

Due to this severe outbreak the Cook County Chapter's operations were taxed to the point where funds from the previous year's March of Dimes were virtually exhausted. At one point last summer, Mr. Budd declared, the Chapter was spending $2,000 daily for medical, hospital and nursing care, alone for infantile paralysis patients in the County. All other functions of the chapter were in greater demand including the recruitment and payment of full salaries of 81 nurses to supplement those in local hospitals, purchase, repair and emergency deliv-

FIRE DESTROYS GARAGE AND KENNELS;
AUTO AND 8 PUPS PERISH IN FLAMESSon Of Former Marley Pastor
Now In Scotland

From a newspaper in Baxter, Iowa comes this account concerning Rev. Henry Rust who is located in Edinburgh, Scotland doing church work.

Rev. Rust is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Henry L. Rust of Baxter. The elder Rust is a former pastor of the Marley Community church.

"Rev. Henry Rust, formerly young Congregational minister of the First Congregational church of West Boylston, Mass. has sent New Years greetings from Edinburgh, Scotland and writes that Great Britain has grave shortages, grave business problems and little for the consumer to buy but that the British people are running true to form and showing 'determination to see this through.'"

"Rust went last year to Coventry, England to work with Leslie E. Cooke of the big Congregational church there since last spring, at the invitation of churches in Edinburgh, Scotland he has been helping in the youth program at the Morningside Congregational church in Edinburgh. At the same time he is studying at the University of Edinburgh and New College.

"Bread rationing, milk at 2 pints per week, little and expensive fruit are still a part of the British life. There is no starvation, but 'it takes some getting used to' as they say here, and there are grim evidences of its effects in certain types of disorders and under par health."

"Along with his work, Mr. Rust has had an opportunity to see much of England's rural beauty and historic centers all on 'tons of cooked cabbage and American dried eggs.' This country has had seven years of austere living which reveals something of the stress of war for this civilian population."

"England is a poor nation," Mr. Rust continued. "The labor government is progressing with nationalism. It is taxing big estates and landed gentry out of existence. The taxes are high and finances of the nation are being equalized so that it is becoming a mid-

Rev. Rust was born in Silver Cross, hospital in Joliet about 28 years ago, when his father was pastor of the Marley Community church. His mother is the former Miss Birdie Bowen of Marley, the daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. James R. Bowen also of Marley.

Rev. Rust is a graduate of Grinnell college, but he took his theological training at Andover-Newton Center Mass. and was ordained to the Congregational ministry in his first pastorate the West Boylston, Mass. Congregational church which he served until he went to England. He expects to return to the U. S. A. next summer.

"THAT OLD FEELING"
ON THE AIR FRIDAY

Listen to "That Old Feeling" on the Will County Health Department Radio broadcast over WJOL Friday, January 10 at 10:15 AM.

Adults, especially in this age of advanced civilization and easy transportation, too often neglect their muscles. Every person needs exercise, but the kind and amount depends upon his work, his physique, his habits and his health. Like everything else, exercise should be taken in moderation to give the best results. After proper exercise, one should have a feeling of comfortable fatigue. It is not a good practice to exercise until "all in", comments Dr. Cecil A. Z. Sharp, County Health Officer.

Fire broke out suddenly in the garage of Mr. Joe Doyle on First street in Mokena, Wednesday evening about 10:20.

Mr. Doyle, who raises thoro bred registered Springer Spaniels had a corner of the garage partitioned off for kennels which were well insulated. In one kennel were the Spaniel mother and her 8 puppies, 16 days old. Mr. Doyle thought he heard an unusual noise coming from the mother dog and went at once to see the cause. He saw fire in the garage and quickly ran and raised the overhead door of the garage, when billows of smoke covered him. He quickly ran to the rear of the garage and kicked in the door of the kennel where the puppies and mother were, and also the kennel where the father of the dogs was, but they wouldn't come out. He reached in as far as possible to save the animals, the mother came out and finally the male dog, but the puppies, which were just starting to walk, did not get out.

Mr. Doyle ran quickly to the house about 40 feet away and called the Mokena Vol. Fire Department which responded. Their quick action saved the house, the garage was beyond help.

A few minutes were lost by not being able to connect the fire hydrant near the Doyle home, as it had been cracked by someone running into it.

Had that party reported running into it, it would have been repaired at that time and saved time Wednesday mite.

Connection was made at the next hydrant and in a few minutes water was being played on the house and garage. The house was badly blistered and one storm window and window cracked, otherwise, no damage was done to it.

By trying to get the puppies and dogs out, melting tar from the garage roof dropped on Mr. Doyle's left hand, burning it somewhat and the two dogs were also burned, quite badly, but they will recover.

In the garage was Mr. Doyle's Master Chevrolet Town sedan, 8 years old and in very good condition. It was completely burned as were all other contents of the building, such as bicycle, good garden tools, Yard Boy lawn mower, window screens of the house, good wheel barrow etc. It is roughly estimated the damage is about $2,500 partly covered by insurance.

Because the wind was coming from a north westerly direction, the house was saved from the direct flames. It is thought the fire started from a short circuit in the automobile.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our great appreciation to the Mokena Volunteer Fire Department for their quick response and efficient work in fighting our garage fire Wednesday night, and in saving our home. Also we want to thank Mr. Joe Dunn druggist of the Cavett Drug store for his professional assistance in caring for injuries from burns at the late hour.

Anti-Frost Machine Will Save Orchards

Michigan Machine Will Raise Temperature

By W. J. DRYDEN

A new machine designed to protect farm crops, particularly semi-tropical orchard crops, has been perfected at Michigan State college.

The machine heats the plant and soil by means of an oil burning heater costing about $125, which sends out infra-red heat waves. Cost of operation is about 75 cents an hour.

Severe frost damage has occurred in many fruit-growing areas and young trees have been severely affected. The new machine, shown in illustration, should prevent much of the loss.

The cause of frost damage is well known. Heat which is stored up in the soil and plants during the daylight hours is rapidly radiated into the atmosphere on still, cloudless nights. Lower layers of the atmosphere become chilled and on sloping ground, the chilled air, increasing in density, moves to the lowest situation. For this reason the new invention will prove of real value to orchard operators in many sections of the country.

Rid Farm of Wild Garlic With 2, 4-D

It will take only about 100 gallons of 2, 4-D spray mixture to rid the average acre of wild garlic. Winter has proven an ideal time. It will aid in eradication if the application can be made when the land is free of snow.

By applying the mixture in the winter, all the germinated wild garlic plants will be killed and sufficient 2, 4-D will remain in the soil for two months to kill late germinating plants. Some spot spraying may be necessary the second year.

Many cities and road districts plan to use 2, 4-D to kill weeds along roads, parks and public land. Tests conducted last year have proven the value of this weed killer.

Indoor Hopper

For best results one foot of mesh hopper space should be provided for each five hens. In case of small flocks it might be advisable to increase the space. With this type of hopper, daily filling usually is advisable. The V-shaped hopper should not be over-filled.

Electric Water Heater

Pieces of metal tubes such as down spout, if closed water tight on one end, make satisfactory water warmers. Light bulbs are inserted into sand for retaining the heat. The tube stands in the water pail.

Get Busy When Pigs

Develop Diarrhea

When pigs have diarrhea, the cause should be found immediately. It may be the symptom of a serious disease.

Diarrhea in pigs also may mean an attack of cholera, necro or one of several other diseases. The hog raiser should be especially suspicious if the bowel trouble is accompanied by weakness or other symptoms, says Dr. L. P. Doyle of Purdue university.

SOME short while back, one of the leaders in college football asked your correspondent to name the 15 leading coaches in the country. The only answer we could think of in a given time limit was this: "The 15 coaches who have the best material."

There is little questioning the fact that for the season of 1946, Red Blaik of Army deserved his award, due largely to the fact that Red and his staff carried Army three years without a defeat.

Time and again we have been asked to rank the coaches in order.

This is an impossible job. Look over just a few from the list—Neyland of Tennessee, Blaik of Army, Harlow of North Carolina, Odell of Yale, LeBrucherie of U.C.L.A., Bierman of Minnesota—but why keep on? This is only a partial list, where, if given the same material and the same schedules, luck would have to write the story.

I can say this. There is no bunch connected with sport that gives as much time, thought, worry and complete concentration as football coaches give. They brood by day and night. An ankle, a shoulder, a knee or a back can make all the difference in the world. Those in front figure they must stay there. The losers must win a game or two.

There is a big difference in material from time to time but the old grads and the public at large never consider this. They look only to the final scores. Such coaches as Red Drew of Mississippi, Red Sanders of Vanderbilt and Paul Bryant of Kentucky may be unknown nationally, but they are as good as the best with what they have.

'A Coaches' Coach'

There may be a better coach than Dick Harlow of Harvard—but who is he? Neyland of Tennessee can keep pace with anyone. Jock Sutherland was the coaches' coach in college until he came over to pro ranks. Spend a few days with Steve Owen and Greasy Neale, in or out of season, and you get part of the answer—fall, winter, spring and summer—they're always talking and thinking football, still playing over games they lost.

Lonnie Stagg at 84 was still in harness this last season, reluctant to retire. Lonnie was a star at Yale, 60 years ago. With all the tears they shed and all the moaning they give the world, it is almost impossible to shake them loose without using a grenade.

Your correspondent more than once has ducked the opportunity of picking or trying to pick the 10 best coaches of all time. Looking back to something over 40 years we'd say that four of the best were Pop Warner, Knute Rockne, Hurry-up Yost and Percy Haughton.

Pop Warner gave football more on the technical side than anyone else, including the single and double wing, a system still just as effective as the T.

Colorful Yost

Yost gave football its first flare of coaching color and Michigan its first great college football record—56 victories in five years, blemished only by a tie with Minnesota, before Chicago broke the string in 1905. Knute Rockne brought to football its greatest combination of coaching ability, human interest and personality. Rock, in addition to being a great coach, was also the game's star personal contribution when it came to human contact.

Bob Zupke of Illinois brought to football coaching the added gifts of philosophy and humor. Zup had more color than two rainbows. One of his best friends was the late Howard Jones of Yale and Southern California. No two men were ever further apart as human beings. But they were fine coaches and close pals.

Haughton of Harvard today is a greatly underrated coach. Cold, hard, austere, he was one of the greatest. A star tactician and technician, Haughton was probably the best of all in discipline. As Tack Hardwick told me once, "If Haughton told Harvard to jump off a 100 foot cliff and he would catch us—we'd all jump. And Percy would catch us."

Character Builders

The thousand, at least a thousand, football coaches we've met and known in the last 40 odd years, have made an almost unbelievable contribution, not only to sport, but also to the good of the nation at large. Not all of them, of course. But the big majority have turned out a great job in the way of training, instruction, discipline and, if you'll pardon the phrase, "character building."

Did you ever know Dan McGugin or Lonnie Stagg? Ask their players, many of them now gray or bald.

Simmer Protein Foods
"Boiled" eggs and "boiled" ham are really not boiled by good cooks today. Instead, protein foods are simmered or cooked in water just below the boiling point. Greater tenderness results from cooking longer at a lower temperature.

Odd Eggs

By curious adaptation, the eggs of one family of birds nesting high in the cliffs in the Faroe islands are shaped like tops. They roll around but seldom off a slightly inclined ledge.

Chicken Meat

Dark meat of chickens is richer in the vitamins riboflavin and thiamin, but the white breast is higher in content of niacin, another vitamin, according to the department of agriculture.

Herbs for Seasoning

Garden herbs for seasoning winter meals should be gathered for drying while the leaves are still green and tender and before they are nipped by frost.

Keep Herbs in Dark

To keep the color of dried herbs from fading, store the herbs in glass jars that have been painted black or wrapped in dark paper.

New French Law Hits at Sale of Forged Paintings

To prevent the sale of forged paintings, France now has a law under which an official group of art experts passes on the authenticity of every picture put up at public auction.

Furthermore, the seller usually gives the purchaser a written guarantee that he may return the painting within six months if he doubts its authenticity.

Portland Vase Smashed, Yet Increases in Value

The British Museum in London recently purchased, through a private bequest, the Portland Vase which it has had on loan from the Portland family for 135 years, Collier's reports. Ten inches in height and made of blue glass engraved with white figures, this vase was found in a tomb near Rome in the 16th century.

Moreover, in 1845, a lunatic smashed it into some 250 pieces and, although put together by experts, it has since been imperfect. Yet the vase has increased steadily in value.

The price paid for the vase by the museum was not disclosed. However, in 1929, the owner refused an offer of $148,000 for it.

LET US TELL YOU MORE ABOUT IT

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Twenty-five years have elapsed since the disappearance of Richard McFarlane in World War I and his wife, Julia, is beset with fresh worries as the children she has raised with the aid of her father-in-law, John I. McFarlane, become involved in World War II. Ric has "washed out" of the air corps while Spang Gordon, Jill and Spang go to a dance and when Spang doesn't profess his love for her, Jill is hurt. He does tell her, however, that Ric is paying attention to a divorcee of questionable character. Jill determines to go to camp to see her brother and also to talk to Spang again. She tells Julia her plans.

CHAPTER VI

"I think it's a beautiful idea. Dave was in love with you when you were seventeen, he told me so. Grandfather's old, and I'm not going to be around forever—I hope. Though you may have me on your hands. Maybe I'll be one of those bright spinsters who fade reluctantly and get hopsy, with tanned-leather hides and lean hands that grab for highball glasses. Or I might turn coy and wear pastel-colored clothes too young for me, and make up tales about my lover who died in the great war. Could be."

"Don't be disgusting, Jill!" Julia spoke crisply, as she went out. Julia went to her room and closed the door. Though the working outfit she wore was soiled and dusty, she sat down on the edge of her prim white bed. Jill's abrupt remark, flung in her face as ruthlessly as a dash of cold water, had set stirring within her that current of rebellion that she had fought so long and conquered up to now.

Why couldn't she grow old? Old and cold and patient, with no dampened fire flaring to trouble her at unexpected moments, no dreams to drift like sunken clouds across her dull horizon? What a relief to be old, so that she would never again have to know this aching lack, this hunger within herself for a little understanding, a little tenderness!

Richard was dead, and yet he would not die. Something of him stayed alive, to tease and haunt her, as he had tortured her when her love for him had made her abject and naive and too pitifully vulnerable.

For years John I. had been nagging at her to have Richard declared legally dead. So many things were involved, he argued. The title to the property, her children's inheritance, everything she had worked so long and so hard to attain.

What money John I. had, Julia knew, was willed to Jill. He had always been a little impatient with Ric, dubious about him. Money ruined the McFarlane men, he declared, softened and spoiled them. Only work could save them. Because she knew how John I. felt, Julia had been a bit more generous with her son, foolishly generous, no doubt, but her lenience had eased some grimness in her, the unforgiving thing she had not been able to conquer.

The war, the air corps, had been right for Ric, she was certain. The farm had always irked him, but his recklessness would be appeased by combat. She had put her maternal apprehensions down and forced herself not to worry. Ric had to do this thing, it meant salvation for him. And then for some reason unexplained—because a desperately efficient army machine never bothers with explanations—Ric had failed his examinations for the cadet corps.

"The punk!" Jill had been scornful. "He slid through college on his ear, and he expected to get by a military board the same way. He'll be a Joe gunner or a grease monkey now."

Haunting Memories Of Richard

But Ric's luck had held, the same luck that had been with him when he talked himself out of jams at school, when he slid free of speeding charges, when he wangled extra money from his fuming grandfather. He had got an assignment to officer's school.

"He'll flunk it, you'll see," Jill said.

But Julia had held to hope because she was Ric's mother. Ric was her deep heart, Ric was the man in her life. But never from her handsome, insolent son had she had consideration or tenderness. To old John I. she was a partner, adequate, standing on her own feet, wise. But to Dave Patterson she was a woman.

Leaning her burning cheeks in firm palms, Julia wondered if she had depended on Dave too much. He had been the one person to whom she owed no responsibility other than the gladly given gift of kindness and comradeship—he had been a rock on which at times her weariness had rested. She had been fooling herself, of course. And now Jill's sharp young ruthlessness had torn all her carefully arranged pretenses to shreds.

She had known for a long time that Dave's feeling for her was more than friendliness. She had pushed the knowledge away, she had refused to acknowledge it, even to herself. She had tried to hold him off, yet keep him, too. She knew now how unfair she had been. Having little to give, she had taken too much, cherishing the small warm feeling of being separate, of being chosen.

Somehow, she had to make it up to Dave. That she could love him in return was something this rigid thing in her heart would not permit her to consider. She had frozen herself into a mold so long ago. She could not alter the form of what she must be to herself, but with that sureness came an overwhelming loneliness. She had dedicated herself to a memory, to a ghost, and it was like being chained to an unanswering tomb. The dreadful part was that there was always that secret feeling of menace about that tomb.

"I'm a fool!" she said aloud, sharply, snatching her hands down and jerking her body erect.

She doused her face with cold water, gave her hair a few disciplining strokes with a brush. She had to take the truck and go out and check the corn yield with John I.

Love—she twisted her mouth as she thought of it! There was no time for love. And no dignity about it for a woman past forty, a woman who had spent herself for love once and got only a promissory note for recompense.

"So nice to see you again, Spang."

That it had been only the fevered passion of a girl, that this other ache in her heart was real and living, she would not admit, even to herself. But Dave must not be hurt. He had loved another woman once, been married to her for a brief time, but she knew that that old love was now only something frail and sweet to Dave, a fragrance like that of a pressed flower, a wreath laid on a slender grave. But that grave had closed, while if she, Julia, had a grave to keep it would not green, it would not soften with time, it gave her no peace.

Brother and Sister Talk

A sidling thought came into her mind. Perhaps if she was clever about it, she could maneuver Dave into falling into love with Jill. He was too old for her—as old as her father, as a matter of fact—but Dave's heart was youthful while Jill had grown a little too mature, had let her age trouble and tense her.

It would solve two of her problems, it would ease her conscience, she thought. But also it would leave her terribly alone. With no one but John I., who fought off age fiercely but who must succumb inevitably to what he called "that damn almanac."

She would not think about herself, she would not think at all. She would concentrate on meat-curing formulas, she would give up bothering about lip-stick and the right foundation garment. She would grow old, like a country woman, with no graces—utilitarian. She made herself believe this as the little truck rattled up the rocky lane and through the gate into the vast cornfield. She walked between the ripening rows and jerked at thorny vines that snatched at her ankles, she tore away husks and examined the drying ears critically.

Old John I. marched beside her, saying nothing. But she could almost feel his keen eyes burning into her, she knew what he was thinking because he had told her bluntly not so long ago. That she was a sentimental, weak-minded fool!

The hotel near Ridley Field was always excitingly full of officers and other uniformed men, and Jill had a new dress of aquamarine faille that brought out all the fruity tints of her hair, and a saucy little hat that did exactly the right things for her eyes.

She called the field and left a message for Ric as soon as she arrived, and presently he telephoned her, his voice sounding just a trifle impatient.

"Hello, Jill. I wasn't expecting you down. Mother with you?"

"No, Dooley didn't come. How are you? Can you get off to have dinner with me tonight, Ric?"

Ric hesitated for a breath. "Not sure," he said then. "They've been mighty tight with passes lately. I'll see what I can do and call you later."

"I thought you always had a B pass into town."

"They've canceled a lot of passes in our squadron. I might be able to wangle one. Stick around the telephone, and I'll let you know."

"Tell them your only sister came miles to have a look at you. You aren't being shipped out, are you, Ric?"

"No orders yet. Nothing but rumors. Mother all right?"

"Oh, yes, everything is fine. Try to get in, will you? I came a long way to see you."

"I'll do my best, Jill, but this is the army, you know."

Jill hung up with some irritation. Now she must wait till she heard from Ric before she called Spang. She tried to summon a gay assurance as she made herself pretty before the mirror, but her heart was shivering and she decided that if Spang brushed her off casually this time she would go back to the farm and devote herself to pigs forever.

An hour passed before Ric telephoned again.

"Sorry, Jill, no soap. Tough luck for both of us."

"Could you see me at the gate after five, if I came out in a taxi, Ric?"

"Can't even do that. I'm stuck on a detail tonight. Sorry I didn't know you were coming down, or I would have tried to make a swap of some kind. Let me know a week in advance next time, will you? And give Mother my love. I'll try to write next week. Been busy as the devil."

"All right, Ric. Sorry. Good-by."

Probably he had had his pass canceled for some reason that he didn't want to tell her. But now Ric was definitely out of it, and she was free to spend the week-end as she pleased. So she put in another call for the field and asked to speak to Lieutenant Spencer Gordon, only to be told that the lieutenant had signed off the post and gone to town.

Well, if he was in town there was a chance that she might meet him, so she touched up her make-up and gave her hat the right tilt and went downstairs. For all her reckless remarks to her mother, she had always despised girls who ran after men and were easy to get and therefore vulnerable, but this was different. She wasn't going to hurl herself at Spang's head. She was going to be lightly indifferent, though heaven knew it wouldn't be easy, keeping a cool head while her heart was burning like a mad bonfire!

Spang was nowhere about when she went down, but she knew that this small and continually crowded hotel was the town rendezvous for all the officers and men at the field.

So she went into the dining-room and took a long time ordering her dinner, not looking around, ignoring the groups of jaunty lads in khaki who turned on her bright, direct glances.

If Spang came into the room she would know it. Something acute within her, tuned to response, would know when he was near. She was so sure of this that she ate very slowly, buying an evening paper from a soiled little boy, studying the pages with exaggerated interest between sips of the slightly warm tomato juice they brought her.

So she was startled an hour later when the dinner having dragged itself out through three cigarettes, she rose at last to go, and there was Spang sitting near the door with two other officers. They were finishing plates of apple pie.

Second Meeting With Spang

Spang jumped to his feet as she approached, and the other men got up, too.

"Why hello, Jill!" he cried. "I didn't see you in here. May I present Lieutenant Crawford and Lieutenant Stark? Miss McFarlane."

The two young men bowed, and Spang pulled out a chair.

"Sit down and have something more with us, Jill. When did you come down? Mrs. McFarlane with you?"

"No, I came alone." Jill dropped into a chair, leaned her chin on her palms, smiled at the three of them impartially. "I came down to see Ric—my brother," she explained to the two strangers, "but it seems he's forfeited his pass or something, and I was just making up my mind whether the bus or train would be the most hectic way to get home. So nice to see you again, Spang."

"You mean you were going home without even letting me know?" Spang demanded, scowling at her.

"I did telephone." Jill kept her touch light. "But you'd left the post, and it didn't occur to me I'd meet you here."

THE AUTHORITY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—John 2:1-16. MEMORY SELECTION—Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.—John 2:5.

The witness of John concerning Jesus as the Son of God had been attested by the divine knowledge of Jesus and his personal call to his disciples. Now the time had come for him to declare his authority as God by an overt act which all men could see and understand.

It is interesting to note that for this, the first of his miracles, he chose a festive occasion in the home. He had been invited to be a guest at a wedding (v. 2). Those who ask him to be present at their marriage may confidently expect him to be present and to add greatly to the real joy of the occasion.

The authority of our Lord shows here in three different ways:

I. He Commands (vv. 1-8).

He was neither host nor was he the one charged with responsibility for the serving, but when the time came for him to do his mighty act the servants were ready to obey the admonition of his mother and do what he said.

Mary may have had some responsibility for serving the guests. Why then had she not looked to the supply of wine? Apparently she who knew of what had taken place at the baptism of Jesus and immediately after, and having in her heart the memory of what occurred at his birth (Luke 2:14), thought it time for him to do some great miracle.

He was indeed ready to do so, but in his own way. "What is that to thee?" in verse 4 really carries the meaning: "This is a matter which I must care for in my own way," and he did.

We do well to seek grace to be like the servants who did what the Lord commanded, even though it did not seem to be a sensible solution to fill the jars with water. Obedience without hesitation and without question is the price of blessing!

II. He Creates (vv. 9-11).

The act of creation was already done, but now the fact came to light. He had changed the water into wine, the juice of the grape. This was not a case of adding something or diluting the remaining wine. Here the water, as he decreed it even without the use of a spoken word, was no longer there, but the best of wine.

Jesus was and is the Creator. He was present at the beginning of all things (note the "let us" in Gen. 1:26), and it is declared that "by him were all things created" (Col. 1:16, 17). In fact, "without him was not anything made" (John 1:3).

What he created was good, so good in fact, that the one in charge of the feast remarked about it. The Lord never does anything by halves, nor in a careless or defective way. He made a great quantity of wine (probably more than 100 gallons) and it was of the greatest excellency.

Some would read verse 10 as though our Lord were here helping along a drunken wedding party, but of course that is not true. The steward was simply recognizing the ordinary rule of serving whereby one uses the best one has until there is no more like it, then takes the inferior provision. To use this verse to excuse drunkenness is only possible for those "eager to mar, if by means they could, the image of perfect holiness which offends and rebukes them" (Trench, quoted by Lenski).

III. He Controls (vv. 12-16).

After a few days with his family and his disciples, he went down to Jerusalem for the great feast of the Passover. There he found his Father's house being misused and defiled. His holy indignation kindled, he spoke and acted with authority as he drove these "racketeers" out of the temple.

People like to hear about a God of love, one who knows their weakness, and is kind toward their infirmities. But we must not forget that God shows his love by a great and holy hatred of sin, and a desire to deliver us from that sin. This means that he must and will deal in drastic fashion with those who persist in their sin.

This is a majestic picture. The Son of God and Son of Man steps into the center of this unholy traffic and with mighty, holy indignation (not anger) drives it out.

Why did these men who were so deeply entrenched and so eager to make money flee before the wrath of a lone man? It was only because they recognized divine authority. He has a right to control men, for he is God.

It is not a mere matter of reform, for here he was cleansing the temple, the very heart of the life of the Jewish people. He dealt with a present situation to establish an eternal principle.

We cannot help but admire this magnificent Jesus, but the question comes to us today, Has he been given his proper authority over and in our lives?

Spoils Decrease
Counterfeiters cheated the American public out of only $48,000 in 1942, compared with spoils of $771,000 per year between 1933 and 1936, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica. A counterfeit bill often can be detected by comparing it with a genuine bill of the same denomination, paying special attention to the quality of the portrait, which is usually fine in a genuine bill. Counterfeit coins usually feel greasy or slippery.

Rufe's Ramblings

By Rufe Pickett

The last time I was down in Moore county they were using the territory over along Deep River as a training ground for jungle fighters.

Tents were pitched around thicker than hay stacks on bottom land and more soldiers were walking up and down the streets of Carthage than there were in another famous city of the same name when it was destroyed several centuries ago.

I was standing on the sidewalk when a young private came up to me and wanted to know where was the nearest PX. I told him that I was an old soldier and if he meant what we called a latrine back in 1917-18, to just go across the street to the court house. Frankly up until then I had never heard an army store referred to as anything but a canteen. Well he looked at me for a moment and, either on account of my ignorance or the Yankee brogue which I have acquired since I have been living up here, and he sez, "You're from the North too?" Naturally that swelled me all up, and then he wanted to know if I'd ever eaten any hottens. I told him that I had been in many a restaurant in my time and was familiar with roast a bif, bif stew, and pitch pie, but hottens were Greek to me. "You've missed something," sez he. "These folks down here quite often invite us into their homes for a meal and they'll pass a plate full of them steaming hot and insist that we take another hotten and put some butter between it." I admit that I'm English descentage and I never realized till I got back up here and saw people carrying home store boughten light bread that folks down home still eat hot biscuits instead.

'TIS the beginning of the New Year and once more we present our Readers with our Almanac for the ensuing Twelvemonth. Again its monthly verses are transcribed from ingenious Authors and other Almanac Makers. Again the ensuing Things to be Bourne in Mind are the Editor's. These Admonitions have to do with Household Observations and Aspects and other Pleasant things; to which has been added profitable Prognostications for 1947.

COURTEOUS READER, The monthly Verses I have again this Year transcribed from several ingenious Authors; but the ensuing Admonitions I offer you as something of my own, not borrowed nor stolen. THE EDITOR

JANUARY

A chap please feels it's dead on a holiday
As much as he'd like to be his last one.

JOHN HARTLEY

New Year's Day, a time for introspection: shortcomings are reviewed with Candor & Clarity; the recent past in retrospect affords the most exquisite theme; the future holds anxiety. Be not lost by the indirection or guilt of a moment; but resolve to look to the well-being of your household in the year to come, not forgetting your appliance servants.

MARCH

Harmon of April
days, and they were ill was sleet, the other was snow,
I was the worst that I've did know.

ROBOWING DAYS

Dirty traveling except for the paces overhead. Be on guard against sudden colds. Employ crilamps throughout your house, not only in the sick-room, to repel noxious germs.
Let your heat lamp offer solace aching joints: the back of your scrooline, & such like.

FEBRUARY

On St. Valentine's day, as sure as the clock
First Servants will answer the postman's knock
The weather, I believe, we prophesy colder.
Will some days be warmer and some days be colder.

WILLIAM HARE

Mutual aspects are happy for lovers this month. There is strong Probability of the 14th day being attended with great Ardour
the length & breadth of the land. However, the Weather remaineth cold. And although the days grow in length, the sun spends grudgingly of his benign rays. So let us turn to our sun lamp which gives a most lively colour to our complexion whilst making amends for Sol.

APRIL

At Easter let your Clothes be new
Or else be sure you will it rue.

FOOT ROBIN

A visible conjunction of Flattery & Vanity in many places, and, alas, of Envy & Anguish.
Just as elegant attire is an ornament to her Beauty, so is a shining house to the Virtue of a woman; she will enlist vacuum cleaner & attachments; washer; plentiful effusion of hot water. And bravery in apparel is nothing worth if a man has not dressed his garden properly: how can he reap if he does not sow?

TAXES FROM UTILITIES PAY EDUCATIONAL COSTS

From the taxes collected by the states, the counties and the municipalities comes the money that pays for our public school system. I do not have available the figures showing the number of students in the primary public schools of the nation, or the annual cost per student of maintaining those schools.

For one state, California, I do have such figures, and one other figure that is of interest when applied to the maintenance of the primary schools of that state.

In California the average daily attendance of students in the primary schools, those embracing up to, and including, the sixth grade, is above 600,000. In 1944 the daily average was 630,648. For the same year the total cost of maintaining those primary schools, including all salaries and materials, but not the cost of construction of school plants, or any interest on bonds, amounting to $66,859,494. The annual cost per student attending those primary schools was $105.99.

The money to pay those bills in California, as in all other states, comes from taxes, but who pays the taxes? One very large source of tax money is the utilities—the railroads, gas and electric companies, municipal transportation systems and others when they are privately owned. I do not know the total of such taxes collected in California. I do have the total of what the railroads pay as taxes to the state, counties and municipalities in the year 1945. That total was $13,475,805. Railroad taxes in the state, not including any paid to the federal government, was sufficient to provide primary education for one out of each five of the boys and girls attending the primary public schools in the state. If to that could be added the taxes paid by all the other privately owned utilities in the state the total certainly would be above one half the price paid for educating those primary school students.

What is true in California would, on a percentage basis, prove true in all other states. A very large part of the cost of educating our little Mary Jones and Bobby Browns is paid by the privately owned utilities. It is such utilities that a minority of our people are demanding be taken over and operated by the federal government. If that were done the federal government would pay no taxes to any state, county or municipality. We, the individuals of each state, would be forced to dig down into our jeans and provide those many millions for school funds, or compel the little folks to face the problems of life without an education. Taxes paid by the privately owned utilities, including the railroads, can, and very largely do, represent the difference between a literate or an illiterate nation.

"No more you buy meat on Monday."

"Who are you who tells me when I can, or cannot, buy meat?"

"Me!" I'm Kravenskey, president of the district Meat Cutters union, AFL. I tell you."

I had thought I was living in a free country, where only the cop and the traffic officer could tell me where to get off. Then I find this guy, Kravenskey, president of the Meat Cutters union, and he tells me. He makes it stick for a week, for I did not get my pound of hamburger on Monday. And his name is Kravenskey, which sounds Russian to me.

It is a multiplicity of such incidents that is causing the real, liberty loving Americans to get fed up on labor union activities. Again, his name is Kravenskey.

Another Christmas has passed into the limbo of years. How different from those of boyhood days in Iowa. Then my one most cherished present was an orange, always in the toe of a Christmas stocking, and the only one I saw during twelve months. Now I spend Christmas in the midst of oranges. They are growing all around me, and are as common as were apples of the long ago years. While they would be spurned as Christmas presents by children who live around my home, there are grandchildren in Minnesota and Canada who appreciate it when old Santa leaves, not one but a box, of the golden yellow fruit. As for my neighbor children, they consider apples as a holiday luxury. It is of such things that markets are made for all America.

There is a difference between a desire to have and an ambition to secure.

Since VE Day we have largely financed the relief extended by UNRRA in Europe. We fed, clothed and, in all probability, helped to re-arm Russia and her newly acquired Balkan satellites. For pay we have had insults, bad names and every possible opposition to our plans for the rejuvenation of Europe. Now we have quit. Our state department has decreed no more American dollars for UNRRA. Again we are called "Uncle Shylock," as we were following World War I. It is time to say "no" to future cries for help.

DISPLAY HISTORIC DOCUMENTS

WASHINGTON.—Attorney General Tom Clark is hatching a unique plan for selling civil liberties to the American people. He will send a special train through the 48 states carrying some of the priceless treasures of American freedom.

It was Clark, working quietly behind the scenes, who had more than anyone else to do with organizing the president's special committee on civil liberties, which will study southern lynchings and race problems.

Accordingly he has evolved the idea of sending a special train across the United States containing the most sacred documents of American history which guarantee our freedom.

At first Clark proposed equipping two special cars with showcases which would display the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation Proclamation, the Constitution and so on.

However, he found that the Proclamation of Emancipation by which Lincoln freed the slaves was in the hands of Abraham Rosenbach of Philadelphia, famous collector of old manuscripts. Clark, therefore, called Rosenbach to tell him about his plan and ask for the loan of the proclamation.

Rosenbach agreed to cooperate, and suggested an entire train instead of two cars. He offered to help raise the extra money and, as a result, it now is planned to equip an entire special train with showcases in which will be displayed the most cherished documents of American history. Soldiers will guard the train, just as guards stand watch continually over these documents in the Library of Congress. In addition, as the train arrives at each state border, an extra car will be added displaying the historic documents and civil rights mementoes of the state.

Finally, Clark plans to have large-size duplicates of the freedom documents "blown-up" as permanent exhibits to be left behind in the high schools of each city through which the train passes.

IRON CURTAIN STAYS DOWN

Assistant Secretary of State Bill Benton, who has tried desperately to lift the iron curtain, recently was prevented by the Russians from visiting Moscow.

Benton was scheduled to fly to Moscow with Chester Bowles, his old advertising partner. But the Russians found Benton had only 48 hours in which to make the trip, let him get as far as Berlin, then stalled him for 48 hours, claiming Moscow weather made it impossible for his plane to land.

Finally, Benton went back to Paris, where he checked by coded cable with the American embassy in Moscow, found that the weather in Russia had been perfect during the time he was being barred from the Soviet capital.

Benton, who is in charge of state department information, has tried to beam radio broadcasts into Russia in order to give the Russian people the real truth about the USA. Many Russians don't even know that the American army and navy participated in the war against Japan.

NEW WAGE POLICY

A new policy line in preventing strikes was agreed on at a secret meeting of Secretary of Labor Schwelienbach and his top advisers. Hereafter, government mediation machinery will swing into action four to five months before union contracts expire in major industries, instead of waiting until union demands and strike threats are in the air.

It is felt that many serious work stoppages can be avoided if union demands are anticipated and negotiations begun well in advance of contract expirations.

First major industry on which the new policy will be tried will be the maritime, which faces another possible work stoppage in June. At that time, union contracts of seamen of the AFL and CIO on the west and east coasts expire.

PROBE MONOPOLY

The department of justice is trying to decide whether to bring anti-trust proceedings against American Telephone and Telegraph company for freeing out small competitors. Independent would-be manufacturers of telephone equipment have little chance to break into the market because of the A. T. & T. policy not only of owning all its own equipment but buying it from its own Western Electric company, a 99 per cent A. T. & T. subsidiary.

CAPITAL CHAFF

The coal strike may seriously affect next year's potato and apple crops, according to the department of agriculture. The trouble is that the shortage of coal tar curtailed supplies of insecticides, which are needed to fight such crop pests as the chinch bug, the European corn borer, the codling moth and the potato bug. . . . ABOUT NEW YORK

The rare Chinese fruits hawked in Chinatown are grown on Long Island. . . . Waterfront workers have names for various piers. They are usually named after gals. . . . Despite the legend that Manhattan is all stone and steel, the borough is dotted with more than a hundred parks. . . . Thirty-two years after Columbus discovered America the strip of land known as Manhattan was discovered by Giovanni da Verrazanno. There isn't even a street named after him.

The lower end of Manhattan (between the Battery and 14th St.) is the oldest section of the city. . . . During the 17th century Wall street was the favorite hangout for pirates. Coin your own wisecrack. . . . Greenwich Village originally attracted struggling artists and scriveners because rents were cheap there. . . . Only one railroad has entry for its freight into Manhattan by land—the bulk of the railroad freight must be transhipped by tug and barge.

Meals in the city's housegows are planned by expert dieticians. No room service, however. . . . The Battery derives its name from a British fort that was once situated there. . . . South St. is dominated by the sea. Sou'westers, sea boots, pea jackets, dungarees and other equipment for mariners are displayed in shop windows along this sector.

Chinatown's notorious Tongs now are peaceful benevolent societies. . . . West St. is a man-made street. It used to be under water. . . . Those grimy edifices near Battery place reveal their pre-Civil war glory in carved lintels, arched doorways and ornate cornices. . . . If you want to view the Big Burg's pell-mello-drama in action, go to the waterfront—where tunnels, railroads, ferries, boats, subways, buses and road traffic clutter the sector with all types of transportation carrying passengers and products to and from the city. . . . Some of the Bowery's dismal buildings contain secret passages—once used as hide-outs for criminals.

The pungent aromas around Reade St. emanate from the huge warehouses there stored with coffee, tea and spices. . . . Syrian confectionery shops at the foot of Washington St. have the most unusual and tastiest goodies in town. . . . The most colorful edifice is the Western Union bldg. It's stacked with 13 different shades of bricks. . . . Hart's Island prison hasn't any cells—only dormitories. Hmf. Such airs! . . . There are dusty tablets marking almost every historic New York event. The plaque on the building in Exchange alley marks the site of the residence of the first white men on Manhattan.

The Big Town's least known government bureau is the art commission. It okayes the designs of all public buildings and works of art. . . . Didja know Radio City studios are coated with a special sound-insulating glue? . . . The architect who supervised the building of city hall received $6 per day—a very good salary at that time. . . . No one need go hungry or homeless in our burg. The department of welfare is ready to provide food and shelter for all unfortunates. Then howcum there are so many panhandlers?

Tombs prison derived its funeral name from its predecessor on that site, which resembled an Egyptian tomb. . . . If you want a unique experience, see the Chinese films exhibited on the Bowery. . . . Central park was built as a relief project during a depression.

Quilts hanging on poles advertise a market for bed linens on Grand St. . . . Criminologists from many parts of the world witness the police department's daily line-up. . . . The Bowery slums were once the site of lavish farms. The Dutch word for farm is bowerij. . . . The stretch between Delancey and Houston Sts. is jocularly known as Thieves' Market. Those who have small objects to exchange or sell congregate there. . . . Eighty per cent of the Waldorf is built over the tracks of the New York Central. . . . The income from the elegant residential district between Fifth Ave. and University Pl. goes to support a home for poor sailors. The owner made that request in his will.

Fourth Ave. has the longest row of second-hand book emporiums. Five blocks long. . . . One hotel in Greenwich Village supplies chess sets gratis for its intellectual guests. . . . Poets tack their verses on a fence along Thompson St.—and offer them to passersby for two bits. . . . Allen St. is a study in contrasts: Its shops showcase the most priceless antiques as well as the cheapest machine-made articles. . . . The Lexington thittir lobby features an ornate fountain mit live goldfish.

AROUND THE HOUSE

To restore and preserve cane seats treat lightly with linseed oil. Be sure all excess oil has been wiped away.

Cloth-covered suitcases can be restored to newness by covering the fabric with a coat of high grade lacquer.

To prevent windows from sticking, rub a little floor wax in the window sash groove.

To remove the metal base of an electric light bulb that has broken in the socket, push a cork into the base and turn it.

Winter window washing is made a lot easier by adding denatured alcohol to the water to prevent freezing. Wipe quickly with crushed tissue paper.

Still Second Rating

The touring company had never been of the best, and when they reached the stage of playing to the family of the man who owned the little country theater, and found that even they left at the end of the first act, it was decided to break up. Two of the actors set out to work their way back to New York.

They were lucky enough to get a passage on a barge, and when passing through a lock they overheard this conversation:

"What you got on board, Jim?"

"Load of fertilizer and a couple of actors, Bert."

The two actors looked at each other in silence, then sighed deeply.

"Cyril," said one, "shall we never top the bill?"
